CHAPTER 4

How the dates were chosen

- The panchang. Each day is rated for griha pravesh by its nakshatra and weekday (the activity's favourable set), its tithi (Rikta tithis and Amavasya avoided) and the special yogas of the day; only days rated good or excellent go on.
- Tara bala. The day's nakshatra counted from your birth star in rounds of nine; the 3rd, 5th and 7th (Vipat, Pratyari, Naidhana) are left out.
- Chandra bala. The Moon's sign that day counted from your birth Moon; only the 1st, 3rd, 6th, 7th, 10th and 11th are kept.
- The windows. The good Choghadiya periods that do not meet Rahu Kaal, Yamaganda or Gulika, and Abhijit (except on a Wednesday).

Many families also ask their own pandit to confirm the final time against the family's customs; these dates are a strong place to start that conversation.

CHAPTER 5

How this was made

Computed in the sidereal zodiac with the Lahiri ayanamsha, for Jaipur, Rajasthan. The rules follow Muhurta Chintamani and the panchang tradition, in our own words.

A muhurat is the tradition's choice of a good beginning, not a promise of how things turn out. It is not legal, medical or financial advice.
